THE SPIRIT

of Christmas graces Upland homes

Festive parades, crowded shopping malls, glittery street decorations and storefront Santa Clauses are sometimes not enough to put people in the "holiday mood."

Someone, somewhere, is bound to utter the oft repeated words: "It just doesn't feel like Christmas."

Well, members of the Upland Woman's Club believe that the spirit of Christmas, like charity, begins in the home.

Hand-crafted holiday centerpieces and original interior designs were featured last week in the club's tour of four homes decorated for the Christmas season.

The motifs were all different, ranging from festive to rustic, but they had one thing in common. They captured the anticipation and excitement of the holidays, saturating the homes with "Christmas spirit."

The home tour was conceived as a way to get everybody in the Christmas mood, said Sarabel Yahne, who invited the public into her house at 1347 W. Shannon St.

"A 'Christmas sharing' was the original idea behind it," said Yahne.

She added the event was a way of "brainstorming" various ideas for holiday decorations.

"Seeing what someone else has done can spark something in your own mind."

The tour also sparked up the group's coffers, recently drained by various charity projects.

Yahne's home was decorated festively, with bright reds and greens abundant in the crafted centerpieces and the plastic holly wrapped along her staircase.

Antique ornaments, some of them replicas, hung from the Christmas tree as the yarn figures of Mr. and Mrs. Santa Claus stood guard atop the mantelpiece.

Yahne proudly led the way to an upstairs bedroom where she had designed a special holiday scene.

"I thought I was being terribly creative with this, so no snide remarks," she said turning into the doorway.

Toward the front of the room, a large stuffed bear sat in a rocking chair, his nightcap tilted to the side.

He appeared to be reading "Twas the Night Before Christmas" to a gathering of stuffed animals, bears, penguins and an especially attentive Woody Woodpecker.

"I borrowed all my grandchildren's toys for this," she said with a chuckle.

In another bedroom, small red and green ornaments decorated a bare miniature fig tree.

And throughout the house there were the customary plastic Frosty-the-Snowman figures.

A plastic Christmas tree mounted on a coach light outside the home of Mrs. Rose Helmick, at 303 Deborah Court, marked the second stop on the tour.

Also on the lawn was a confused Rudolph-the-red-nosed-reindeer, meaning everything but the wooden animal's nose was painted red.

A large flocked tree, with gold ornaments, highlighted the gold color-scheme of the living room.

Elegant.

Helmick's husband, Van, makes wooden toys and is also an artist. Much of his handiwork — toy soldiers, miniature sleds and Rudolph-the-red-bodied-reindeer — were used to spruce up the home.

There were small Christmas trees in every room, decorated with different themes. Her daughter's tree was covered with Snoopy ornaments, while white silk poinsettias graced the tree in the upstairs' bathroom.

Mrs. Evedna Jarvis likes roses and antiques.

And her Christmas decorations are subtle enough not to detract from the natural beauty of her flowers and furniture.

There were table settings and wreaths, with the ever popular fake doves.

Jarvis also displayed a few ceramics that she has made through the years. But the real spectacle was the 500 rose bushes in her backyard at 1404 Tulare Way.

The last place one would expect to find extravagance is within a mobile home.

But there is no other word to describe the pearl and crystal-covered Christmas tree within the mobile home of Mrs. Mary Pecora at 8651 Foothill Blvd., Space 153.

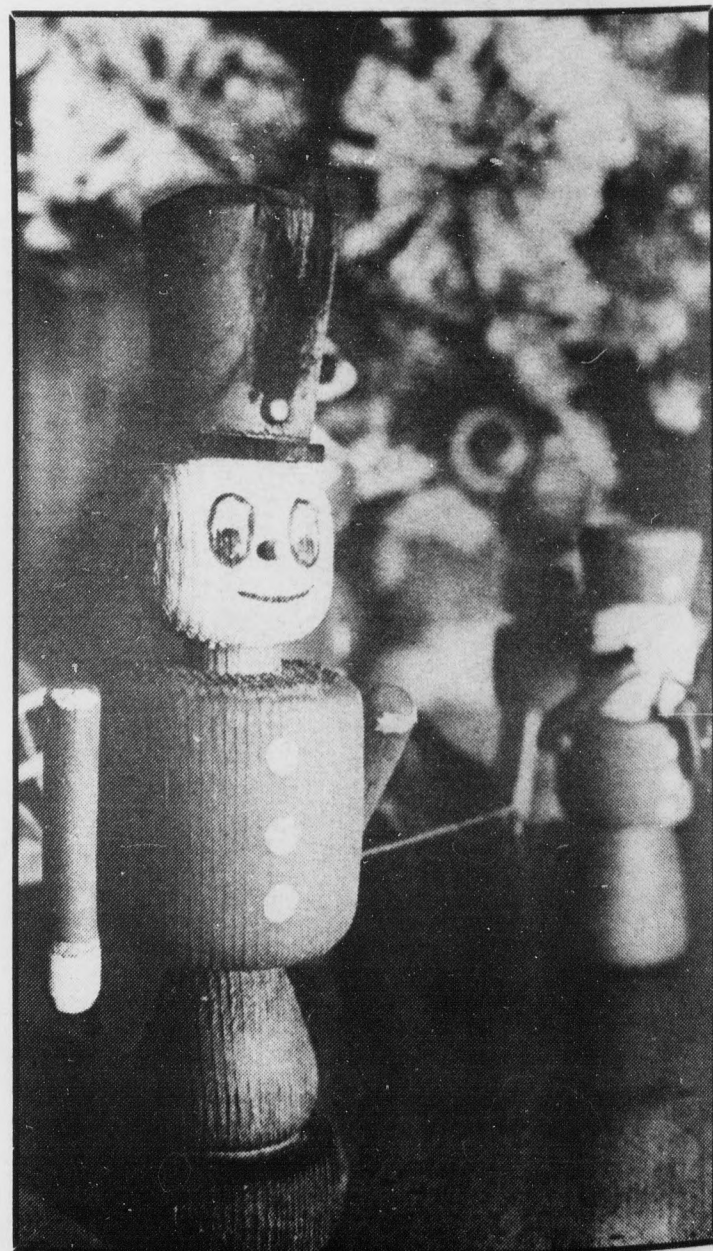

Small pearl chandeliers and crystal icicles adorn the white flocked branches.

Also sparkling was a mosaic of a Christmas tree, made from old jewelry once worn by members of Pecora's family.

"When you have a lot of time on your hands, you can do these things," she said. □

Wooden toy soldiers (right) stand guard over gaily-wrapped gifts in the home of Mrs. Rose Helmick, 303 Deborah Court. On the cover: Holiday centerpieces added a joyous elegance to homes in an Upland Woman's Club tour.

An artist's life can take some hazardous twists

By Terri Tirella

Decorating windows is one way to pay the bills, but it has its dangerous side, says Alta Loma artist Becky Cox.

"When I painted the Brass Balloon (an antique store in Upland), I had to hang by my fingers and toes on a ledge two inches wide while I painted candy canes and Christmas balls," said the intrepid artist.

Windows, however, are just one aspect of Cox' trade. "Painting is my living ... I paint windows, vans, motorcycles, murals, pictures and wall plaques," she said.

The Alta Loma artist started her painting career after she and her husband separated and uses only the name "Becky" professionally. "I was married for a long time. He was the sort of husband who really didn't want his wife to do anything outside the home so I only got to do things (artwork) once in awhile."

Speed is of the essence for an artist like Cox, who also strives to have her work "look right" when it is done. "You're not going to be able to pay for meals for a day if you're not fast," she said.

"Painting is something you can do anywhere. You can get a fair and fiestas book and go from event to event painting windows three weeks before. You paint most of the windows in town and get yourself a pocket full of money."

After painting for a while in a small town in Central California, Cox took a highway out of town, to Idaho. "I went for a year and had my son there. During hard times, I had to walk 12 miles, carrying my kid on my back and paints in front to earn money to fix my van."

Her son James is now 3 and a little too big to accompany her on her jobs. "I like to have him with me. He tells me I'm doing a good job and will flag people on the street and say 'look at what my mom's doing.'"

Being a professional artist suits Cox's lifestyle as far as mothering is concerned. "Being a mother is important to me. I don't have time for trying to make a living as a waitress or working in an office."

Not making steady money is a drawback, but the potential for making money is there. "The amount of money you can make is only limited to how much art work you can do," Cox said. She manages to earn enough to care for herself, her son, and eight Great Danes.

"I raise the dogs. I have three adult dogs and five pups. They're amusing to watch and loveable."

Cox studied art at Chaffey Community College, taking classes in advertising design and photography. "I grab a class on the run now and then," she added.

Ideally, Cox would like to design album covers, but currently she is working locally. A lot of her work is from former customers asking her to paint for them again, ranging from portraits to store-front windows.

"When I don't have work, I'll call a potential client and make an appointment to show them my portfolio. Store owners or managers are busy people. If they aren't interested at the time, I leave them a card and hope they call me."

"I like to see a decorative on windows. Work of people who are not professional painters is easy to tell. The painting does not complement the business, it doesn't hang together as a decoration. They're amateurs and it shows," she said.

"There's a person in Ontario who goes from business to business using a stencil of the same Santa's head. It gives window painting a non-professional aspect. We get no respect for our work," she said. □

Training for bus drivers

School bus drivers may receive free in-service training, Monday, Dec. 19. Six hours of classroom in-service will be given at the Transportation Department of the Ontario-Montclair School District, 950 W. D St. in Ontario. Class begins at 7 a.m. to 1:30 p.m.

C.P. (Neely) Titus, OMSD transportation director, is the instructor. "Ten hours of in-service per year are needed to maintain a bus driver's certificate," Titus said. "Six of those 10 hours during the last year before renewal must be in the classroom. This class will satisfy that requirement."

All school bus drivers are invited to attend. They do not have to be OMSD employees. For information call 983-9501, extension 180.

Holiday fire safety's a burning issue

It's Christmas time again, a time when all thoughts should turn to peace, goodwill and fire safety. Fire safety?

Not only is Christmas the happiest holiday of the year, it is also one of the most dangerous.

Vera Arthur, fire prevention specialist for the Foothill Fire District, offers timely tips to help prevent a happy holiday from turning a memory of pain and loss.

"Pre-cut Christmas trees are one of the most hazardous items you can bring into your home. Keep your tree fresh as long as possible by placing the trunk in a bucket of sand that is kept moist or in a container of water."

"Don't place the tree too near a heater or fireplace. It will dry quicker and can ignite very easily from a stray spark," she said.

Checking wiring and sockets on all lights prior to placing them on the tree or house and not placing electric lights on aluminum trees is also recommended by the fire district. A spotlight is recommended for illumination to prevent shock.

"Be careful not to overload household wiring with electrical lights and decorations and remove your outdoor lights as soon after Christmas as possible. Leaving them up through the year promotes deterioration that could lead to fire," Arthur continued.

When cleaning up after a party, dampen contents of ashtrays before emptying them. "A smoldering cigarette can ignite paper in your waste container. Check furniture, looking under cushions for live cigarette ashes or dropped cigarettes. These can smolder for hours before bursting into flame," she continued.

"If you haven't purchased a smoke detector, why not plan on doing so now? It's an inexpensive investment that could save the lives of you and your children. Above all, have a happy and fire-safe holiday season." □

Growth in R.C. leads to Northkirk Church

By Terri Tirella

Presbyterians belonging to Northkirk Church in Rancho Cucamonga can easily remember their beginnings because they tie in with another historical event — the eruption of Mount St. Helens.

The church family, which meets at Carnelian Elementary School in Alta Loma, celebrated its third birthday May 18.

"We are only one of numerous new churches that have used school facilities to hold our services," the Rev. Gerald D. Lyman said.

"Our experience in meeting in a temporary facility is similar to at least half of the new churches which are growing along with Rancho Cucamonga," he said.

According to Lyman, the presbytery saw rapid growth in Rancho Cucamonga in the early 1970s and that's what began efforts to start a new church.

Even though Northkirk does not have a permanent home, that hasn't stopped the church from developing its Christian programs.

"We have a full church program, which we developed gradually as the church has developed," Lyman said.

Since summer, the church has held meetings for college, career-oriented youth.

Northkirk has a senior high group that meets bi-monthly and a junior high group called YONKS — Youth Of NorthKirk.

Church school is held for youth from first to eighth grade. Adult Bible study group meetings are held Wednesday night.

"We have a choir and our Women's Association has two circles, one which meets at night and one which meets during the day," Lyman said.

Other groups include Mariners, a monthly program, and Serendipity groups for "sharing, caring and studying."

Since the local Presbyterians are without a building, Vacation Church School was held in a backyard, under a black tarp.

"We used the tarps to protect the children from the sun; but during June, it turned out to protect them against the rain," Lyman said. "It was rather successful. The kids enjoyed being outdoors."

Congregation-wide events are also held. "We are looking forward to our Christmas program Sunday, a dinner and program which will illustrate Christmas in other lands. We're having a pinata for the children," Lyman said.

In January, the congregation is going to begin use of a telephone evangelism program in which calls are made to 4,000 homes.

"We're going to call people in Rancho Cucamonga to see which people have churches and inform them there is a Presbyterian church."

According to Lyman, Presbyterians stand within the Protestant and reform heritage.

"Our most significant emphasis in Presbyterian faith is probably our belief in the sovereignty of God, by which we mean God is in control of the world which He has created and continues to sustain."

A Presbyterian church service is much in "the middle ground in style of worship. We're not as informal as some, but not as formal as others," Lyman said. "The congregation does participate in prayer."

Coffee Fellowship follows services, giving an opportunity for people to become acquainted with one another.

The butterfly has been a symbol for the new church, Lyman said. "It's symbolic of new life, resurrection and Jesus Christ. We have made use of it in various ways.

"We are the northernmost church of our neighboring Presbyterians. We like to think of our church as a compass, giving direction in a person's life, bring more meaning into their lives," Lyman said.

Northkirk was formed with the help of three other Presbyterian churches, First Presbyterian of Upland, Western Presbyterian of Ontario and Claremont Presbyterian Church.

The church does plan to build a home on 3.3 acres it owns at Haven and Highland avenues.

"We're currently working with an architect to have a schematic of plans for our church. We hope in 1984 we will begin construction," Lyman continued.

Lyman said the congregation will be having a campaign in the future to finance its building fund. It has received funds from the denomination for the building itself, as well as for off-street improvements.

Also ministering at Northkirk is Darel Griffin. "He is parish associate and serves the church through preaching and marriage encounter interpretation. He is employed as a school counselor and is an ordained minister," Lyman said.

Church services are at 10 a.m. in the multipurpose auditorium, at Carnelian Elementary School, 7105 Carnelian St. Sunday school meets during the service. For information, call the church office, 980-0446.

Telling Your Children About Divorce

Q. What is the best way to tell young children about an impending divorce?
A. Sharing the news of a marriage breakup is certainly a very painful, difficult thing to do. It is important for parents to realize that, despite what they say or how they say it, the information is bound to be disturbing. You can certainly be there to offer emotional support and clear up any potential misunderstandings that children may have, but they will have to go through their own natural emotional response to this event. Some children will need to deny the bad news, others may be very angry, some will express sadness or even relief. They will probably go through a range of emotions, just as you will. With younger children it is particularly important for a divorcing couple to emphasize that their decision had nothing to do with anything that the child did or said. Sometimes children will feel that even their negative thoughts may have caused a separation, and they need to feel that both parents will still love them just as much and that both parents intend to continue their relationships with them. It is also most important not to "badmouth" your ex-spouse to the children, so that they do not feel a need to choose sides or feel guilty about their affections for either parent.

Group wants culture in Cucamonga

By Terri Tirella

The Performing Arts of Rancho Cucamonga is trying to make a dream a reality — one step at a time.

The fine arts organization wants to build a cultural center in the Rancho Cucamonga area. According to Vic Cherbach, one of PARC's directors, the group hopes to convince county officials to declare a piece of property as surplus and reserve it for culturally-related use.

"The property being reserved for use as a cultural center by the county will give a bigger base for grant funds because the county serves more people than just the city of Rancho Cucamonga," he said.

"We're very optimistic that with the help of the county Board of Supervisors, we think we'll get it accomplished," he continued.

"The whole idea is to reserve ground now for a building that might be completed in 30, 40 or 50 years, something that will rival the Dorothy Chandler Pavillion in Los Angeles, something very elegant," he said.

Once the vacant land is reserved, PARC will begin planning a park portion of the area and plant trees.

"Maybe we could use the property for the Wine Festival or as an outdoor concert area," he said.

"Certainly the cultural center will be years in the making, this is the first step. We may stumble a few times," Cherbach said.

The property PARC is interested in is at the extreme north end of Haven Avenue. "The property was once in my family but now it belongs to flood control as an easement. My father donated it (to the water control district). I know just about every rock on the property. It's beautiful up there," he said.

PARC was formed more than a year ago at the home of Becky and Don Hardy. "A group of people in the community wanted to start something to develop culture in our city," Hileen Pelletier, publicity chairwoman for PARC, said.

The non-profit organization has grown and membership activities are under way to inform local citizens, she said.

"The concept for PARC grew out of the idea as something to enhance, not only the city but the entire West End," Pelletier said. She said PARC directors are working with a cultural organization from San Bernardino which is interested in opera. "We are working to see if we can be of help to each other."

She said PARC hopes to sponsor a building or amphitheater. "What we of PARC are doing is for future generations, not necessarily our own. We want to have a place which will lend itself to all forms of art, music, drama, dance, whatever the community desires."

Pelletier said the community has a lot of talent. "Maybe we'll hold a talent show to try and bring some of it out."

PARC is planning a cloggers competition, probably sometime in late spring, according to Pelletier.

The event is being coordinated by Jim Bonner, program chairman and vice president of PARC's board of directors.

"Concerts in the Park," a free entertainment program sponsored by the non-profit group last summer, was deemed a success by PARC members and more concerts are expected to begin again sometime in July, according to Pelletier.

"Vineyard Park is being expanded and we are hoping city officials will consider building a small, little amphitheater. At least that would be a start and give us someplace to hold events so we don't have to go out of the community," she said.

Other than finding facilities to hold cultural events, the only restriction facing PARC is cost. "Until we have a supporting membership we're limited on what we can do. It's hard to pull money out of the air," she said.

To raise funds to sponsor activities, PARC will hold a gift wrapping concession at the Liquor Barn, 19th and Carnelian in Rancho Cucamonga. It will be held through Dec. 16 from 2 to 9 p.m., from Dec. 17 to Dec. 23 from noon to 9 p.m. and on Dec. 24 from noon to 5 p.m.

"We will also have UPS service available for people who wish to ship out packages, but we do have some restrictions — gifts must not weigh more than 40 lbs., are limited to 108 inches in girth and length, and no breakables or glass," she said.

PARC will present a Children's Christmas Show at Alta Loma Junior High School, Dec. 17 at 2 p.m. The Fontana Mummies will present six of Aesop's Fables, according to Pelletier.

"Santa and Mrs. Claus will be there to pass out candy canes. The Kiwanis have picked up the tab for kids from a school for handicapped in Etiwanda if parents can bring them," she said.

Volunteers will be on hand to keep an eye on the children so parents can leave them off at the show and finish up last-minute shopping, Pelletier said.

"We're getting a lot of help and there seems to be a lot of enthusiasm as far as getting people to give of themselves or time to PARC. We've gotten calls from people who would like to see a little theater developed," she said.

She said charter members will receive special seating, parking at events when the cultural center is built.

Chamber's vision saved airstrip

By John H. Nicholson

Last week, we were recalling the early airstrip between the railways in West Ontario. In 1928, the railroads wanted to turn the site into plowed and planted ground. They probably figured that they could gain more than from a silly airstrip.

With a bit more vision, the Ontario Chamber of Commerce got a delay until another facility could be pinned down. There had been an indication of commercial flying already. Waldo Watermand had opened an airline from Ontario to Big Bear Lake.

On the inaugural trip, loaded with civic dignitaries, they arrived at Big Bear in about an hour, as compared to about eight hours by car. All very nice. Taking off for the return trip, the plane plopped into the lake. All were saved, but wet. Not too nice.

Then the Ontario American Legion Chapter got interested, leasing and later buying 30 acres, beside the Union Pacific Railway, on the southerly part of what is now the Ontario International Airport. A few hangars were built, and grapevines were pulled to make a dirt strip.

Ralph Vaughn seemed to be the predominant flyer there. He also took time out to serve as scoutmaster of Ontario Troop No. 1, of the Boy Scouts, aided by Bob Ohle. I became a tenderfoot scout there, before Upland Troop No. 1 was formed.

My first flight was from there, during an airshow. A featured thriller was one "Reckless Rosie." For $2.50 each, I and someone else took off in an old biplane, as Rosie did in another. Once airborne, Rosie climbed out onto the lower wing of her plane.

Grasping whatever handholds she could, she worked her way about halfway out on the wing. As we flew alongside, she gave us a wry glance and pulled her ripcord. As her parachute billowed out behind her, she was pulled off and began her descent.

"My" plane spiraled down to follow her landing, among the pepper trees of South Euclid. Then back to the airport. I was much impressed in looking down on the tiny cars, houses, trees and vineyards. What a thrill for a kid.

Upland, too, had a daredevil or stuntman. This was "Speedy" Babbs. The Babbs family lived in a grove at the northwest corner of Arrow and San Antonio, where the Brethren in Christ Church is now. I went to school with "Speedy's" brother Chester.

"Speedy" seemed game for any kind of thriller — motorcycles, cars, planes and parachutes. He was slowed down a bit one time. Wearing a parachute, he crawled onto the upper wing of a plane, which then rolled upside down and dumped him off, all by plan. He was to freefall a way and open his chute. It wasn't fully open when he hit the ground, flat on his back. It was quite a while before he mended and continued.

In the Euclid Avenue parkway, at Foothill Boulevard, stands the statue of the "Madonna of the Trails." It is one of 12 located across the country, between Upland and Bethesda, Md.

The "Madonna" project was accomplished by the Daughters of the American Revolution (DAR). They mark a pioneer trail across country. All were dedicated on Feb. 1, 1929. Inscriptions on the base of our's tell of the trails use by the Spanish Padres and by the Jedediah Smith expedition of 1826.

The heavy statue was worked into place by the W.C. Cline Co., of Upland, and then shrouded in canvas to await the big dedication. From Upland News photos and peeking, we knew what she looked like. A baby in one cradled arm, a shotgun in the other hand, and a small boy by her side.

Party planned to raise funds for charities

Members of Preceptor Kappa Eta chapter of Beta Sigma Phi will meet at 8 p.m. Thursday in the Ontario home of Marian Brewer for a Christmas party and gift exchange.

The party will culminate two months of work by the chapter in fund-raising activities. Some of the proceeds were donated to the Salvation Army along with a box of canned goods for Thanksgiving. In addition, the chapter currently is collecting gift items to be delivered to the House of Ruth, the shelter for battered women and their children, for Christmas. Last year, the chapter members delivered a set of bunk beds, food, gift items and a cash donation to the shelter.

Other philanthropies of the chapter are Santa Claus Inc. and the Cystic Fibrosis Fund.

jackrabbits and to creep in after dark, to hang them from the hand holding the gun. But, at the unveiling ceremony, it was evident that Pop had chickened out.

Away back then, Upland Riding Academy was located at the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and 13th Street. Nearest to the corner, was a fenced exercise track, with stables and tack rooms to the north. Fifth Avenue ended at 14th Street, but north of 13th, it was just a wiggly wagon track through the sagebrush.

It seemed fashionable to be seen, in riding habit, loping one's steed up and down the Euclid parkway. A big arched sign, just behind the Madonna statue still proclaims the route as "Ye Bridle Path, From Upland to the Mountains."

My old buddy, Don Harris, lived nearby, and while a student, worked at the academy. He recently showed me photos of himself catering to the needs of equestrians at the breakfast club and other functions. Duded out in a derby hat and swallow-tailed coat, he was a most impressive teenager.

We still have a similar facility, known as Westward Ho Stables, on East 21st Street. □

Children need good books on nuclear issue

By Pat Castenada

How can we inform our children about the dangers of nuclear energy without scaring them to death? Most of us rely on television for information for ourselves as well as our children, yet who among us would assert that TV reports are adequate in depth or balance to inform us on an issue so vital it may determine whether there will be a future?

As librarians and professionals, our usual response to this question of inadequacy of media coverage on issues is "read books!" In this instance such a response might not be adequate since few children's books on the subject of nuclear energy cover the subject with sufficient facts.

A review of some of the favorite children's books on the subject of nuclear energy is an eye opener. Take a look at one of our older titles on the subject, for instance, "The Atom at Work: How Nuclear Power Can Benefit Man," by C.B. Colby. This book was published in 1968. It is typical of most children's books on the subject in its emphasis on the many peaceful uses of nuclear energy. It contains one mention-in-passing of the bomb.

The book tells about nuclear power plants, nuclear power on the submarine Nautilus and other military craft, nuclear power for interplanetary travel and rockets, the use of radiosotopes in medicine, the use of irradiation to preserve food. All of the children's books I checked went into great detail about carbon 14 dating of items from antiquity. These books reflect the hopes we all shared concerning the possibilities nuclear energy held for the future. The source for much of the information in them was the Atomic Energy Commission.

A more recent book, "A Look Inside Nuclear Energy," by Charles Cable is much better balanced. It's a more historical approach, and it at least mentions the dropping of the bombs on Hiroshima and Nagasaki, the proliferation of nuclear weapons, the lethal potentials of radiation, the necessity for safety devices in the power plants, and the accidents at Three Mile Island and Windscale in England. The book uses excellent illustrations to explain atoms, radiation, fission, fusion and all those truly incomprehensible things. Thus, one could use this book, or other recent titles, to get across the barebones facts of nuclear power to a curious child.

But such a book still does not get to the moral dilemmas posed by the various uses of nuclear energy. It doesn't weigh the potential hazards against the potential benefits, and it doesn't give the reader even a beginning of a view for doing this because neither hazards nor benefits are sufficiently explored.

Writers of children's books on this subject face a big problem. How does one educate children about the hazards of nuclear power without sentencing them to lives filled with fear? In the early '60s, the results of studies of children's anxieties concerning nuclear power began to appear. These studies, and others since then, show that significant numbers of children are disturbed by dreams of nuclear holocaust.

Einstein observed that to survive the nuclear age we need to evolve new ways of thinking. This observation is particularly pertinent here in the issue of nuclear education. The days of "gee whiz, look at our new gadget," are gone. We need to take another look at the pros and cons of nuclear energy development, and find ways to help our kids gain the information they need to make their own responsible decisions. □

Windows throughout Upland and Rancho Cucamonga have become canvases for local artists and shopkeepers, with holiday characters and scenes filling the glass panes.

Whether it's snowy landscapes with children and snowmen, favorite characters with holiday overtones, or the traditional Christmas cast of Santa, et.al., these whimsical forms of artwork catch the eye and perpetuate the seasonal spirit, according to shop owners.

Window painting is a folk art dating back to the early 1800's, according to Becky Cox of Custom Art Work, who uses only the name "Becky" professionally. "It was originally done for rodeos. Christmas and such came later."

"A lot of the guys would come into town and make their entry fees and hotel money by painting windows," she said.

Every holiday, Becky, an Alta Loma resident for 20 years, literally spreads her craft throughout the West Valley.

"I do all the Newsstand windows, Starship Video's, Steve's Arcade, I'll paint anywhere," she said. Becky does custom artwork on vans, motorcycles, wall plaques as well as painting murals or on canvas.

"In window painting, you want to do something to advertise what the business is you're painting for, if they sell cameras, have a camera in Santa's bag or have him using it; if it's a donut shop, paint someone eating donuts," she said.

"You want to catch the customer's eye and direct them into the business," she said.

Becky uses poster paints when practicing her art which she started working at several years ago. "My dad did window painting for 40 years. I went and painted with him for a couple of years. It was really frustrating because before I was the artist and then I was sort of apprenticing with him, filling in open areas, opening paint jars, but I got to be a lot better (painter)."

She said her biggest problem is her hands get cold. "When I'm painting, my hands are always wet and when it gets about 5 or 6 (in the evening) and your hands get cold and chapped."

Getting paint on her clothes and remembering to charge people when they decide they want additional lettering or characters are other problems Becky has to deal with. "Sometimes customers don't realize when they ask for more, that it means more of my time is involved."

Whatever the customer wants on the window, he gets, but if he desires a design that doesn't suit the window, Becky will make suggestions. "If someone has long, strung-out windows and wants a bunched-up scene, like a nativity scene, you really can't spread it out, it's not decorative. If they insist, I might try to make it a longer scene by having the star at one end, the manger, then the animals, and finally the wise men walking toward the manger."

Santa Claus, "your basic elf" and Smurfs are popular characters this holiday season. "I just groan if someone asks for Santa; but reindeer are still fun," Becky said.

If rain hits the windows, it can damage Becky's creations. "I always leave a phone number so if the paint drips I'll come back and retouch. I like to check my windows periodically to make sure they still look good."

Warm water and soap will get the paint off the window. Most window painting is done on the outside of the window because of problems with detailing. When painting from the inside, eyes, highlights and other details are painted before other parts of the face or clothes so it can be seen from the outside.

Lettering is usually "one-stroke" or calligraphy with a brush. "You don't work with a ruler, you throw it on and hope it's straight."

Becky said she is not as careful with window painting as she would be with other art work. "It's something only temporary."

She said she didn't mind painting on dirty windows because the paint stays on better. "But if it looks dirty or has greasy finger prints, I give them a window-washer's card."

Chaffey College student Denise Salgado agrees dirty windows are a problem. "The paint doesn't go on too well."

She dabbles in the art to earn extra money for holiday shopping. "I've been involved in art for three years and have done windows at Chaffey."

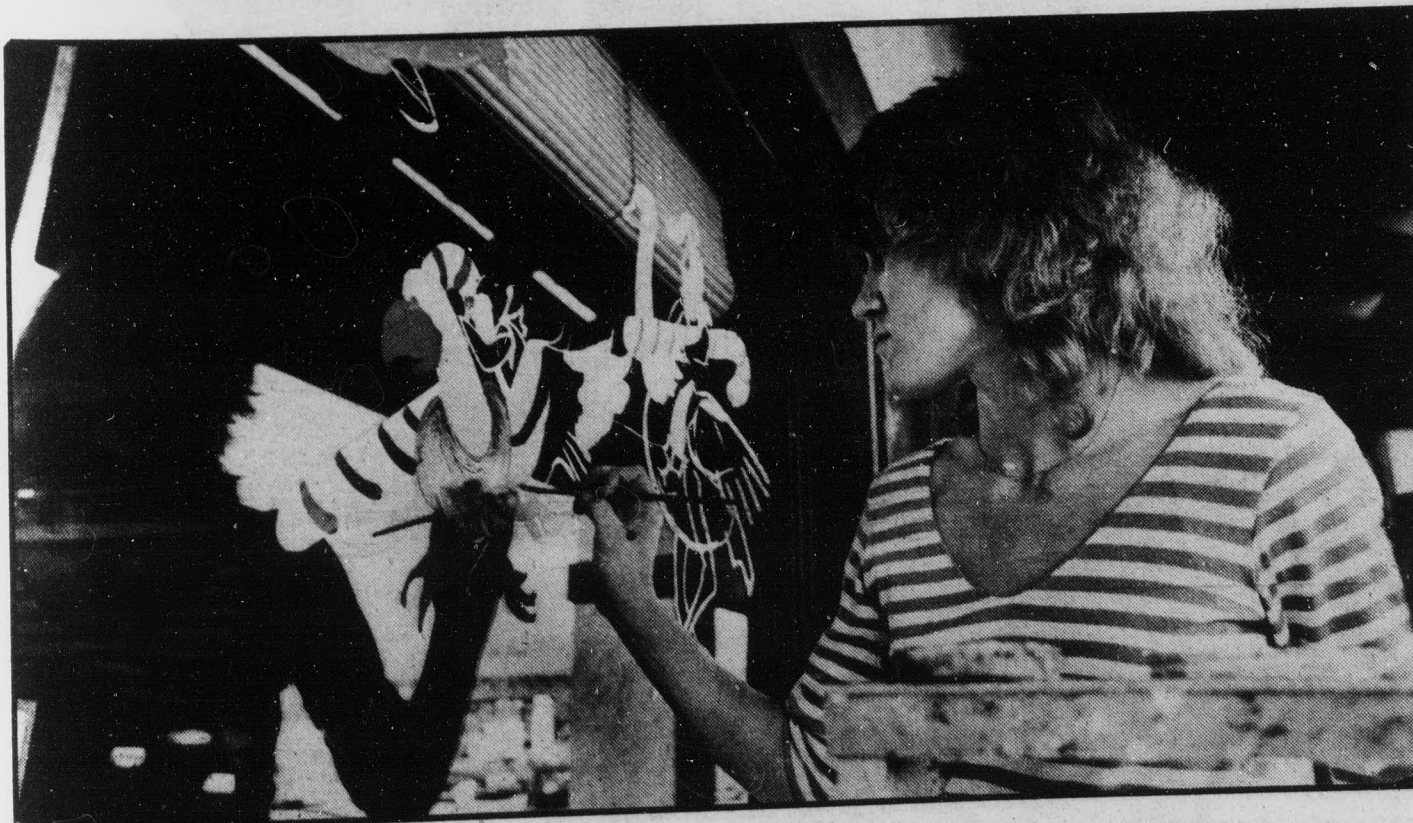

Salgado, who plans to continue her college career at Cal State Fullerton, is majoring in art and math. She wants to become a teacher.

She said she enjoys painting characters from the Peanut's comic strip. "People always love Peanut's characters. I can paint anything else they want too, including Santa and his elves."

"I like to drive around and look at other people's windows," she said. Her favorites are landscapes where the artist has used combinations of colors to blend into a scene, giving it more depth.

Salgado paints with a different style with defined lines. She also likes to use Old English lettering on her windows. "It (the writing) seems Christmasy."

To get that lettering takes time. She draws the letters on cardboard, cuts them out and traces them onto the window so she can get the proper spacing. "When you're drawing something that big up close, it's hard to keep your perspective; you can't tell if you're drawing straight or not." □

Detailing and speed are important to Becky (top) as she is immersed in one of the busiest seasons for window painters. Windows should look good and look professional (above) but artists shouldn't spend too much time at it if they plan to pay their bills.

As the popular song proclaims, "It's beginning to look a lot like Christmas!" It's not just looking a lot like Christmas, but it's also beginning to smell and feel a lot like that most happy holiday of the year.

In the 28 years I've been in this fair state, it's the first Christmas that I've really got in the mood for the holiday before December 23rd.

If you have some folks on your gift list that have just about everything imaginable...how about visiting the Brookside Winery on Guasti Rd. in Guasti.

You'll have a grand choice of wines at low, low prices. There's even a variety of wine gift boxes for festive giving.

Whatever you choose the gracious folks at the winery will offer you a free taste before you buy.

The special prices on any of the wines will expire on December 31st.

For anyone on your list you might think about gift certificates for lunches or dinners from any of our local restaurants.

Many of the fast food chains are offering gift certificates for $5.00 and under, which will make ideal stocking stuffers for the youngsters in the family.

If you're planning to serve tamales for Christmas but don't want to go through the labor of creating them yourself, Taco Hut at 9451 Foothill Blvd. in Rancho Cucamonga will be more than happy to take the work out of your tamales.

A note of warning...order these delectable, homemade Mexican specialties before December 19th to insure delivery.

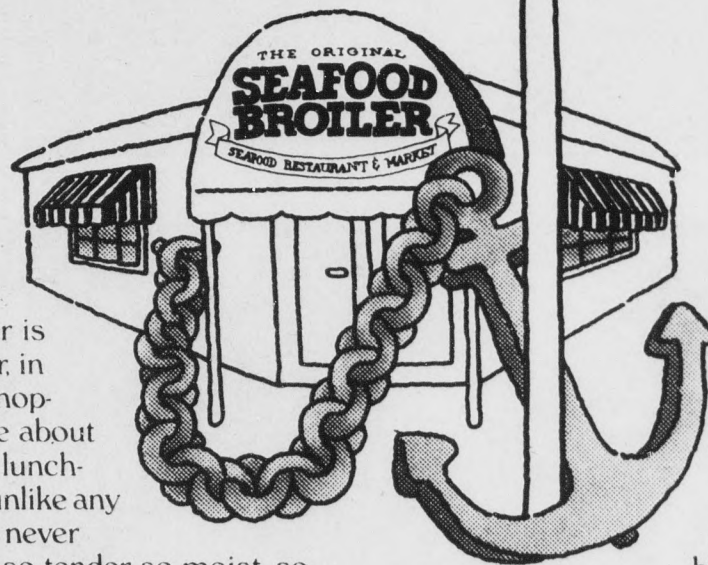

If you'd rather call and conveniently order by phone, the number is 980-6202.

After a hectic bout of Christmas shopping there's not a housewife alive that enjoys going home and cooking dinner.

Rocky's New York Pizzeria at 9615 Foothill Blvd. in Rancho Cucamonga is making it doubly attractive. Not only the convenience of calling and ordering, then picking it up but if you clip the coupons you'll save a few dollars. On any medium you'll save a $1.00, on any extra large a $2.00 savings and on any deep dish you'll save a big $2.50. These coupons all expire on December 31st.

Until next week...Bon Appetit!!

Seafood lovers, your ship just came in.

The Seafood Broiler is now open in Montclair, in the Montclair Plaza shopping center. And you're about to enjoy a dining (and lunching) experience quite unlike any other. Because you've never before tasted seafood so tender, so moist, so wonderfully tempting.

For the seafood here is as fresh as it can possibly be. And that good, fresh, subtle flavor is sealed in, as it is quickly broiled over glowing mesquite wood. All kinds of boneless filet of fish. And crab, lobster, shrimp, clams, oysters, mussels. Your choice of a variety of vegetables. Good hot sour-dough bread. Real butter. Salads. Definitely different appetizers. Desserts to overwhelm your willpower. There's a full cocktail and oyster bar. A rather choice wine list. All in bright, new, cheerful and charming surroundings. And there's even a Fish Market, right in front, where you can buy the best and the freshest seafood, for at-home meals.

Oh, the temptations of it all! Oh, the tantalizing good flavors! And oh, my, the happily modest prices — complete lunches from $3.95, and dinners from only $5.95.

Gary Funtas is Upland High School's girls' soccer coach.

Funtas comes full circle as soccer coach

By Tom Vivian

Years ago, Gary Funtas made his living with his arm. An all-star athlete in the Coachella Valley, he was drafted out of high school by the then Kansas City A's, and played for three seasons in their minor league system.

As Upland High School's girls soccer coach, Funtas has definitely come full circle.

"It (his involvement in soccer) really came about because of my company's moving me around all the time," Funtas said.

His latest move was to Upland, and he said the constant relocation cutdown on the time he was able to spend with his three daughters, so the Funtas family became involved with an area youth soccer program.

"We discovered the American Youth Soccer Organization in Alta Loma," Funtas said.

That was nearly six years ago, and since then the former baseball player has gone from a soccer neophyte to head coach of one of the West Valley's most successful girls' teams.

As of early this week, the Highlanders are 5-2, and Funtas would rule the season a success if his club lands a CIF playoff berth.

Funtas prepped for the job by coaching community-backed teams in the area and by attending coaching clinics.

"One thing led to another, and here we are," he said.

His previous experience with the game had been limited to watching it on Spanish-television stations.

Funtas said he had more than 60 girls turn out for spots on his varsity and junior varsity clubs, and was only able to keep 36. He has also been surprised by the degree of support his team has attracted.

"I am so pleased with the parent and school's support of our program," he said.

Although he has built a groundswell of support, it may be difficult for Funtas to establish tenure in his position.

"This is their fourth season, and I'm their fourth coach," he said with a laugh.

One-third of the way into a 19-game season, Funtas said the play of girls on his team, and in fact, the entire Baseline League, has attracted college scouts.

"We've had visits by coaches from Santa Barbara, Yale, Washington D. C., and Irvine," he said. "These schools are looking for good women athletes."

In addition to a playoff bid, Funtas, a sales manager for a Germany-based firm, said he would also like to see girls soccer achieve equal status with the boys' game.

"I'm confident that we can finish in the top three," Funtas said. In CIF, the top three teams from each league are awarded playoff spots.

"But what we want to get is a little parity," he added.

Funtas said that from a coaching standpoint, girls are already equal from their male counterparts.

"Most of the girls involved with soccer on this level have played it competitively before," he said. "They know what we expect of them."

What Funtas expects is total effort.

Following his team's loss to St. Lucy's, Funtas said he "came down on them harder than ever," and most of the girls handled it well.

"We just didn't give 100 percent," Funtas said. "But after I came down on them, they took it well."

Stampfl, Bringman head polo awards

Seniors Brian Stampfl and Chris Bringman were presented with the top awards at the annual gathering held by the Upland High School water polo squad.

Under the direction of Ed Cutshall, the Scots completed the Baseline League season with a 4-1 record and advanced to the CIF playoffs. Upland ended the year with a 8-12 record.

Stampfl was selected as a team captain and most valuable, while Bringman was also elected a captain and given the most outstanding award. Stampfl was also given the Upland Stud Award.

Goalie Darrell Degner was given the most improved, while the Ciemiewicz Memorial Sportsman award went to James McKinley.

Stampf and John Beebe were also presented with all-Baseline first team honors, while Bringman and Degner and gained second team. Beebe was also a third team all-CIF choice.

In addition to Stampfl and Bringman, other seniors on the squad included Degner, Gene Carlisle, McKinley and Mark Patrick. Beebe, John Coryell, Heather Woodward and Dave Penn will be back as seniors next year, while Garrett Myers and Bill Jollie were the lone sophomores on the squad.

Jollie and Myers were also elected as the frosh/soph team captains and Travis Huxman the most valuable for the young team.

Brault captures skate title

Fresh from his Pacific Coast sectional victory at Paramount over the weekend, Upland's Patrick Brault will vie for the national title Jan. 17 in Salt Lake City.

The 16-year-old captured the novice's men title, beating a field of eight skaters who had qualified by winning regional tournaments. Brault represented the Arrowhead Figure Skating Club.

In addition to Brault's victory, Tiffany Ryan of the Arrowhead Club also won the intermediate ladies' championship.

Brault, the son of Gordon and Marlene Brault, won by finishing first in the figures and free-style. In capturing his first major title, Brault used the same program that carried him to the Southwest Pacific championships last month in South Bay.

Both Brault and Ryan are students of Don Bartelson at the Ontario Ice Center.

Good fishing at Guasti

An average of 750 pounds of trout will be planted weekly through the end of the year at Cucamonga-Guasti Regional Park, where fishing conditions have been excellent.

A total of 1,750 pounds of trout were planted last week, including 1,000 pounds by the state.

According to park personnel, Augie Gracomelli of Diamond Bark recorded the week's biggest catch, pulling in a 5- and 2½-pounds trout with a Veltetta cheese bait.

Other good catches included a 4-pound trout by Ron Cantwell of Pomona on lures; a 3-pound catch by Montclair's Dave Carrigan on lures and 2½-pounds by Tom Marsack of Upland with cheese.

At Prado Regional Park in Chino, Bill Bowers of Rancho Cucamonga had the top catch of the week with a 3-pound, 10-ounce trout caught on lures.

Both parks began their trout season in November and will continue through April.

Fishing fees are $2.50 per person over eight years of age.

Shannon Boyd (21) is key reason Upland's off to fast start.

Upland girls shine

While the season is less than a month old, the Upland High School girls basketball team has already enjoyed a great deal of success.

The championship trophy from the inaugural Rancho Grande Tournament has already taken its place at Upland, the Highlanders earning the title with a hard-fought 41-40 win over Fontana in the championship game last Friday.

In that tournament, first-year coach Steve Russi proved themselves to be one of the top clubs in the West Valley. After an opening round bye, the Highlanders upended Walnut 68-39 and raced past Temple City 75-54.

Senior Shannon Boyd, who finished as the number two scorer in the tournament with 55 points in three outings, was named the Most Valuable Player. She was joined on the all-tournament squad by teammates Jodi Keidal and Karen Kuchan.

Then in the opening game of the Garden Grove Tournament, Boyd blistered the nets for 39 points as the Highlanders raced past Santa Ana 91-49.

The Lady Scots' starting forward is presently averaging over over 23 points per game.

So far, the Highlanders' coach is pleased with his team's play, although he knows there is a lot of basketball still to come.

"I've said it before, I wasn't too sure what to expect when we started this season," says Russi. "I wasn't sure how our talent compared to the teams we would play. I wasn't sure how our speed rated on this level. So far, things have gone well for us. I just hope we can continue to improve."

The Highlanders play Friday in the semifinals of the Garden Grove Tournament, with the finals slated for Saturday night.

Athletic awards go to good sports in Alta Loma

Athletic awards at ALJHS

Parents, teachers and students gathered in the Alta Loma Junior High School Multi-Purpose Room recently to celebrate the end of the football and volleyball seasons and to congratulate participating athletes.

The eighth-grade football coach, Phil Robinson, who led his team to a championship, awarded Eric Holladay the Most Valuable Player trophy. Jeff Kettle received the Coach's Award trophy and Brian Olivo went home with the Tomahawk trophy.

Seventh-grade football coach Gary Oddi, whose team went undefeated to take a second championship, gave Kipp Jeffries the Most Valuable Player trophy. Brandon Proctor was awarded the Tomahawk trophy and Jeff Gillum was named the Most Improved Player.

Named most valuable player of the seventh-grade girls' volleyball team, which ended its season in second place, was Heidi Russell. Jodi Hurst was presented the Tomahawk trophy and Jodi Nelson won the Most Inspirational Player trophy. Coach Alice Evans presented the awards.

Coach Vickie Duncan's eighth-grade girls' volleyball team also finished league play in second place. The team's most valuable player was Candy Tourville, the Tomahawk award went to Kristin Herchenroeder and the most improved player was Lisa Cohen.

Lightfoot bargainhunts

Etiwanda School District's bargain-finder, Superintendent Carl Lightfoot, took advantage of a used school bus offered by a Hesperia bus refurbisher recently.

As a result, the district has bought, for $4,500, a 1966 school bus which seats 76 students.

But the bus rebuilder had another 33-seat bus which caught Lightfoot's eye. The Hesperia man wanted $4,500 for that one too, but he agreed to give the district $200 off on each bus if they were bought together.

Lightfoot couldn't decide. The smaller bus would be perfect for special-needs students who have filled a district van to capacity. Also, the smaller bus could be used for field trips and transporting athletic teams.

But Lightfoot still had reservations. Though the bus is a 1976 model with an automatic transmission, it still only got about the same gas mileage as the larger bus.

Lightfoot bought the large bus for $4,500 and asked the dealer if he could ask his school board whether they wanted the smaller one, at the reduced price. The dealer agreed.

Lightfoot took the matter to the board and said he could see the need for both buses, but "a little voice in the back of my head has reservations."

The board discussed it and were ready to bypass the offer when a school principal pointed out a large bus would make it difficult for a driver to supervise special-needs students.

The board decided it should buy the smaller bus after all.
